The Sites and Sights of Women and Environment

by Marvic Leonen

The rural ecology includes agricultural production in many parts of the southern world. Women play a major role in keeping the delicate balance between productive, reproductive, and ecological functions.
A massive oil spill in August 2006 continues to endanger an already fragile coastal ecology. Women bear much of the burden in adjusting to human disasters such as this.
Major river tributaries in many metropolis nurture households struggling to survive.